Volunteer Firemen Receive 25 Year Pins

Wasatch County volunteer firemen Dean Moulton, Paul Probst and Ren Provost were awarded pins for 25 years with the fire department at the annual State Firemen's Convention, June 13, in Springville, Utah. Moulton is the Wasatch County Assessor, Probst is a barber in Heber City and Provost, who was Fire Chief for five years during the 70's, works at Wasatch Auto Supply.

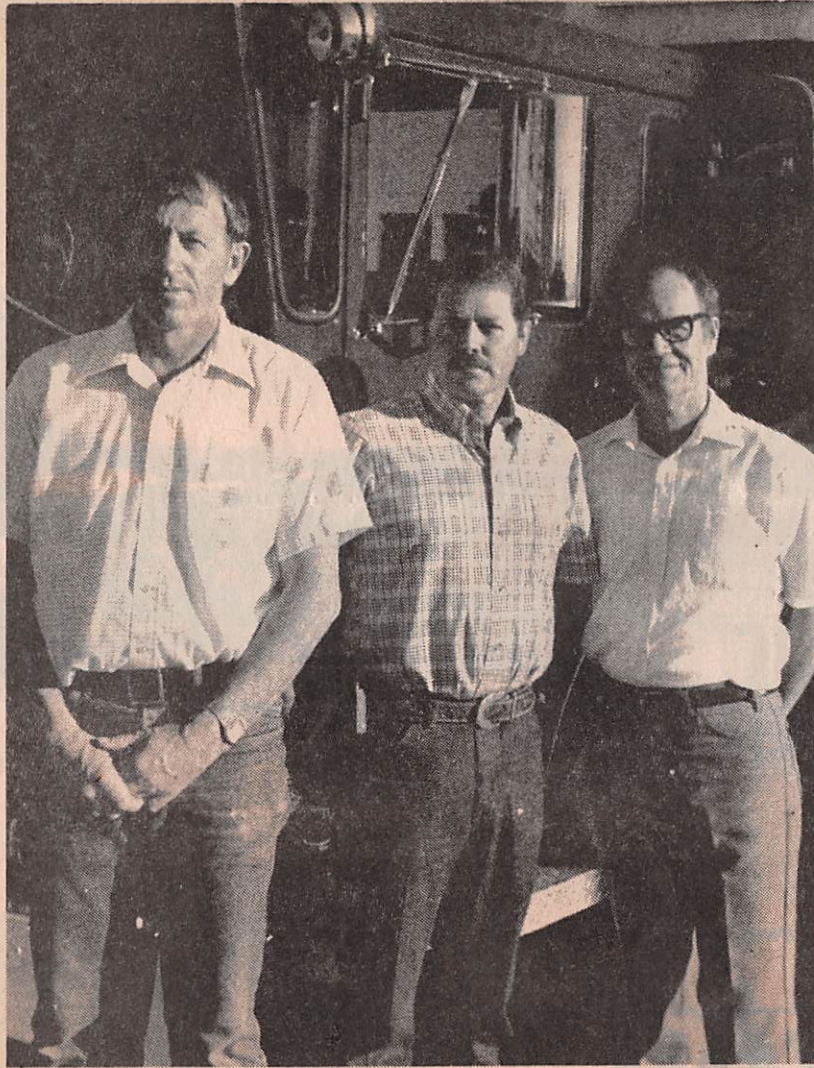

Wasatch County is proud of its volunteer fire department. Despite the fact that the men are called out of sound sleep at two in the morning, away from jobs, or in the middle of a church service, their average response time to the site of a fire is about two minutes in Heber and five to Midway. Part of the reason for such quick response is that many of the men live and work within a few blocks of the fire station. But, they also deserve credit for their personal dedication. Probst is usually the first to a fire, according to the other two.

Although the number of volunteers in the department has not increased in the past 25 years, the equipment has been updated. There was one pumper and one small truck then. The small truck has been replaced and a new pumper was purchased a few years ago.

Wasatch firemen are called to about fifty fires a year. They review their skills and learn new techniques in annual training sessions. A couple of years ago the department purchased beepers for the men to carry, to let them know when they're needed, and their protective clothing has been updated through the years. Wasatch County's fire department is as well-equipped as any in the state.

But, most important are the men who fight the fires. Wasatch County citizens appreciate Moulton, Provost and Probst for their 25 years of dedicated service.

Alice Buehner

Charleston

Mayor Max Carlson and the city council are starting out the new year with a great idea suggested by Joe Weight. They plan to freeze an ice skating rink on the old school grounds. This cold weather had to be good for something.

Now that the holiday season is past only fond memories remain of visits from loved ones. So it is with the Eldon Wright family who for the first time in seven years were together for Christmas and with their own ten children plus all the wives, husbands, grandchildren and grandma Nellie Wright, it made a total of forty people. Tom, the oldest son, and his wife, April, and baby Christopher, came all the way from Cincinnati, Ohio where Tom is a golf pro. While we were freezing in Charleston, Tom and April went to Las Vegas to play a few rounds of golf in the sunshine and to visit a former Midway friend, Dave Den-sley.

A daughter of Blanche and Eldon contributed her share to the crowd. Carol, a petite blond beauty of 24 years is the mother of ten children and this storybook tale is worth relating. Here's how it goes: A year ago, Carol, a divorcee, moved with her two young children into the Heber 7th Ward, where Rod Wade, a charming widower with eight children, lived. Eldon Wright, a former Charleston Bishop of nine years and now a high councilor, was assigned to the 7th Ward. He had noticed and admired the

Wade family, how they managed to carry on after the sudden death of their young mother. One day Carol ran to the high school where Eldon teaches and with a light in her eye excitedly told her father that Rod Wade had called her. She had secretly admired Rod since her early days as a five-year-old mascot for the basketball team when Rod was a senior and Eldon was the coach. The Wright's didn't try to hide their admiration for Rod. After Carol's first date with Rod they asked him, "When are you getting married?" In March of 1974, Rod and Carol were married in the L.D.S. Temple. It just seemed natural for Carol to suddenly have ten children since she came from a family with ten children. She had been a born organizer as a little girl and Blanche still uses the work schedule Carol made when she was at home. Carol and Rod's children all have their jobs to do before school. Allen, the oldest, does the secretarial work for Rod who owns Park City Truck Lines. The next two boys, age 17 and 15, feed the 24 horses, 10 cows and sheep. They also like to help cook as they had early training working at the Crown Cafe, formerly owned by their grandparents. The three older girls, ages 13, 12 and 10 do the dishes each night and before school, they clean two rooms each and help dress the three younger girls, ages 4, 3 and 2. Jeff, age 5, feeds the dogs and cats and empties the trash. Carol cuts all the boys hair in her new family, plus a few neighbor kids. Her first encounter as a mother of 18 year old Allen was when he sat down on a chair and said, "Cut my hair, woman!" She knew then that he had accepted her. The children call her "chick" or "Hopsing" (the cook on Bonanza) but when they're sick or need something, she's "mom." If there are any problems to solve it is usually done at night after family prayer around the king size bed. Conference is held on the bottom of the bed and sometimes the children even bring their friends. How does Carol manage ten children? She has lots of energy and has fun with them. Her attitude is positive and happy. She admits it helps to have Rod's office in the home so that he is close by. The littlest girls are still a little confused as to how Carol got to be their mother. Once as the little girls were role playing, a tiny tot was heard to say, "I'm going to be the white-haired mama that's out in the kitchen, who knocked on our door and said, "Yes, I'll live here." Carol didn't used to like horses, but since she married into the Wade family her life has changed, and according to her mother, "she is only out of her cowboy boots on Sunday." Allen is the Rodeo President this year and Rod races chariots. Once Rod was flipped head over heels when the tongue of the chariot caught in the ground, and Carol didn't lose her cool. They have built an arena at Rod's mother's place and during summer months they hold a cookout four nights a week. Kids from all over come to "Bulldog" (rope steers). After the summer is over, the long horn steers are used for meat to help feed the large family. Carol canned over one thousand cans of food last summer with her mother. On a summer evening the whole family might ride their horses into the hills for family night to pick chokecherries and have a picnic. Carol, Hopsing, Chick, white-haired mama, Mary Poppins, or whatever else you choose to call her leads the way.

STELLA HICKEN WILLMORE 1901

Stella Hicken was born 24 October 1901 to Winnie Murdock and Frederick R. Hicken. When Stella was two her mother died and Stella was raised by her grandparents Orson and Emily Hicken. She had Saint Vitus dance (a nervous disorder which causes uncontrollable jerking and twitching of muscles in arms and legs) and rheumatic fever when young and this caused her to miss school very frequently. Fortunately her health improved and she was able to graduate from high school in Heber. She was greatly influenced by a beloved teacher, William Hicken, who taught her not only the regular subjects but also integrity and dependability.

She married Kenneth Willmore on 19 October 1921. He drove interstate trucks for years and they lived in Idaho, California and Nevada. He was a bishop in Nevada for several years and Stella was active in all the church activities. She had a beautiful soprano voice and had positions leading music most of her life.

In 1963 they purchased twenty acres in Hurricane and built a beautiful home where they have welcomed visiting friends and family members. Bert, one of their sons, has been helping care for his aging parents. Stella is now eighty-eight and Ken is ninety-five. Stella says, "I cannot boast of fame or fortune, health or wealth but I'm glad to have our children and grandchildren come and enjoy all the things on the 'Old McDonald Farm'."
